COMPLETES WRECK INVESTIGATION

Coroner Brown Will Have Opinion Ready by Tuesday Probably—Examined Witnesses Saturday With Representatives of Two Commissions—Hearing Was Behind Closed Doors—Examined into Workings of Signal System.

Coroner Franklin H. Brown, in New London on Saturday afternoon, completed his examination of witnesses in connection with the big railroad wreck last Thursday morning at Stonington. With the coroner in conducting the investigation were Inspector Frank A. Howard representing the state's interstate commerce commission, and Engineer Charles C. Ewell of the public utilities commission.

Coroner Brown will obtain the stenographer's transcript of the coroner's report and after looking it over will be ready to give his finding. On Sunday night he said that he thought he would not make his finding before Tuesday.

The investigation was held at police headquarters at New London, beginning at 10 A. M. and concluding at 3:30 P. M. and behind closed doors. The witnesses were the crew of the freight with which the Adams express train collided, Townerman Wilbur, Conductor Joseph Peterson, Engineer C. Sartori, Fireman George Clark and Flagman Clarence Simpson. Before their reports are made, Inspector Howard and Engineer Ewell will also examine the crew of the wrecked train and some witnesses who were injured in the wreck. Neither of these officers had any comment to make on the wreck, but the interstate commerce inspector made a careful inquiry as to the system of block signals, train order transmission and telegraphic communication.

The only comment that Coroner

Brown made was to remark that several points in the investigation disclosed room for improvement. The coroner also made a brief statement of some of the testimony that had been offered. He said that in the testimony of Wilbur, the townerman, it was shown that at 4 A. M. a chain consisting of the signal wires had been discovered broken. This was an hour and a half before the accident. Wilbur informed the despatcher at Providence and along the train man at Westerly. Between the time of finding the chain broken and the time the wreck occurred, two other trains passed the tower on the east bound track. The engineer of the freight train noticed that the semaphore was halfway down when he drew into Stonington and knew the signal was out of order. As he had orders to stop at the siding, he paid no attention to the signal.

In the testimony of Simpson, the flagman, the coroner mentioned that he told the investigators that he had had only a week's experience as a flagman. He went back 12 poles as ordered, but he did not know the Adams express was coming, and he had no time to make any further warning. He saw the train coming. Conductor Peterson testified that the only watch he carried was one that cost him one dollar. The train was a section of ten freight cars which was part of the train of 25 cars. The ten cars were being placed on a siding, while the greater part of the train had already been placed on another siding.

TAFTVILLE PINOCCHLE CLUB GIVES FEATURE PICNIC.

Not An Idle Moment in Fine Program Provided—Married Men Winners in Baseball.

One of the most pleasant social events in its history was that experienced by the Taftville Pinocchle club here, Sunday afternoon. The club brought out thousands, all with the aim of seeking enjoyment and comfort by the sea, to judge by the crowd at the Taftville beach, the field to capacity the block island and the river boats Sunday. Coming, as it did, after two Sundays spoiled for the Taftville beach by the weather during the day was all that could be asked. Not until 9 o'clock at night, when most of the travellers were on trolleys homeward bound, did rain begin to fall. There was just enough of a shower to put Sunday, with its predecessors, in the wet column, but not in any way to spoil the fun of anyone.

On the trolley roads, too, as the first real summer riding. In addition to the people on their way to the beach, the Connecticut company had several hundred to look after from here bound for the German Country Field day at Richard's grove. Inspector Ladd had the through cars on the main line between Groton and New London, and the half hour cars were doubled during the afternoon. There were 12 extras in all on the Connecticut line, being brought to the total number of cars up to 30, yet notwithstanding the extra traffic and the corresponding demand for power, the electric system worked smoothly all day, and the big dynamo repaired after the recent injury, gave excellent satisfaction. On the New London line, the cars had to drop a little behind schedule during the day, but in spite of the riding, they were not more than a quarter of an hour late any time. Once or twice during the day, the cars were off for a few seconds, probably due to a sudden strain on the power plant causing the automatic circuit breaker to trip.

The river boats had a banner day. The Block Island capacity was taxed by the joyous crowd it took down to the hill and the island. At New London it was reported that many were turned away as the boat was filled to its legal limit. It seemed a small city that disembarked from that boat at 3:30 in the evening. The twin Yantic and Shetucket, carried loads that took all of their available space and the Gardner was equally well patronized. Upon the arrival of the Thames River Navigation company boats here in the 6:30 trip, it was reported that 236 passengers got off and the boat had been so full that no stop was made at Kitteraug.

Franklin square and the streets had a decidedly deserted appearance Sunday afternoon. But at 7:30 they were brought up to their normal level by the hundreds of people who were brought to the beach. Then an hour later the hundreds from the Block Island were added and the city had a more animated Sunday night appearance than it has had for a twelve-month. There were twelve cars in the square at 8:50 o'clock, and half of them were jammed full of passengers. It was a block the place had resumed its usual quiet tone and Inspector Ladd and Starter Kinney knew that their biggest day this summer had been successfully met.

The lawn was prettily decorated with large American flags and there was a large circle formed of many colored lanterns hung in the branches of the trees. Miss Kittle M. Sloan proved a charming and entertaining hostess. Many games were played by the guests who made a pretty sight, while they congregated under the circle of colored lanterns. Miss Gray, dressed in gypsy attire, told the fortunes of those present. The victims entered a good sized tent where the fortune teller sat. The fortune telling proved very realistic and was the feature of the evening. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served during the evening, and a punch bowl proved popular. After an enjoyable evening the guests left for their homes at a late hour.
